Looking forward, I think public and private company valuations are going to continue to diverge. And I think the best private companies today and likely in the future will continue to be valued well ahead of public market comparables. And I think that's driven by a couple of factors, one is there is just a tremendous scarcity of high quality private assets. And there's way too much capital chasing those assets. And the second is some of these private companies continue to grow very, very fast and are well ahead of public comparables.
