When you think about growth opportunity in emerging technologies, what are the key thematic areas of interest to you and your firm?

We at Greylock think a lot about how every company is going through a digital transformation today, so entirely new user experiences driven by software and connected devices. We think about the architectural change that's happen as people go to cloud and building their own software, and then we think there's a Cambrian explosion of software opportunities happening in terms of serving new users and audience groups.